Do you need SQL Server Performance Tuning Help?

The team at Stedman Solutions, LLC (Steve, Bill, Derrick, and George) offer a variety of services, but one that I particularly enjoy is the performance tuning work. This usually involves initial contact with a new client who is having performance problems. From there it leads to a quick 30 to 45 minute call to discuss the problem, then a proposed contract to go and fix the performance issue. Once a contract is in place we dive in to fix the problem.

The performance projects are usually 7 to 14 days long with initial results being shown in 24 to 48 hours after the start of the project.

It starts out with in in-depth review of a SQL Server with specific focus on a performance issue. We figure out where the problems are, is it an issue with disk speed, is there enough CPU available, enough RAM, are there missing indexes, issues with the plans associated, you get the picture. We check over 80 configuration settings and study the system to figure out why it is slow. The WHY is perhaps the most important question to ask, once we understand WHY, we than then focus on fixing it.

Here is what some clients have had to say after working with them on performance related issues.

> We were at the point where we were getting 10 unexpected, inconsistent, errors and lockups. We needed to reboot our service right away. Steve came in and stopped that on day one. Within the first couple days, he had a well thought out, well organized presentation, explaining all of the potential flaws we had in our settings and setup, and a plan to fix every one of them. On the server side, with his great product, DB Health Monitor. He built this program and he gives it out. Charges for his expertise, which is well worth every penny.

And another comment from a performance tuning client.

> Steve is the most reliable and efficient DBA I have ever had the pleasure of working with. He has bailed me out of number of SQL emergencies, and seems ready to drop everything to help his clients. I cannot say enough about his professionalism and work ethic.

If you need help with any performance tuning work, just get in touch with Stedman Solutions, LLC, we can help out.

Related Links:

- Stedman Solutions
- Stedman Solutions Free 30 minute consult
- Steve Stedman Performance Tuning