

Current Scores

Each week this page will be updated to show the current score total in the Database Corruption Challenge.

This list has been updated as of July 20th, 2015 at 4:00pm (pacific time).

Rob Farley in a solid lead with 25 points after earning 6 points by being the first to solve week 10. André Kamman just moved into second place moving the a three way tie to third place between Neil Abrahams, Patrick Flynn and Raul Gonzalez.

Many could move up one point by by linking to the corruption challenge (See the Corruption Challenge page for details) and sending me the link to their post.

List truncated at 2 points, many people have one point who are not shown here.

Scoring criteria (updated 5/31/2015).

- Each week you can earn the following points:
 - 2 points for being the first to submit a correct solution, as long as you mention the contest on twitter, with a link.
 - 1 point for submitting a correct solution before the deadline.
 - Bonus: 1 extra point to everyone who completes the challenge before any extra clues are provided. I will wait at least 24 hours before posting any extra clues.
 - There may be additional points described in a challenge description.
- Once in the competition you can earn points for the following:
 - 1 point for creating a blog post or LinkedIn post that talks about the challenge, and links to <http://SteveStedman.com/corruption> (if you do this you should email a link to the post). For the LinkedIn Post, status updates don't count, you need to click the "Publish a Post" link.
